

At the Mile 12 Market, market women boast about their wares and shoppers haggle for the best deals. Grandmommy and Tola buy yams, leafy greens, red chili peppers, fish, rice, glue, diapers, and a computer mouse.

Host your own market. Have everyone bring in either a craft (friendship bracelets, handmade stress balls, painted pet rocks, etc.) or a snack they've made and set up a market. Establish prices. Everyone should receive the same amount of "money" in the form of stones, paper clips, buttons, or anything else that can stand in for currency. Then allow the group to shop at the market. They can haggle prices up or down or barter if they choose.
